CANOEING

Canoes involve the paddler kneeling or sitting in a raised position and using a paddle with one blade. Canoes can be paddled on flatwater or whitewater, though depending on the skill of the paddler, their use may be limited by the open nature of the craft. Due to the single-bladed paddle, canoeing can be more difficult to learn than kayaking, yet it offers a unique grace and appeal that has continued to draw people to the sport.

Canoes can be used for outings ranging from a few hours to many weeks, and boat styles and designs reflect the intended use. Whitewater canoes are shorter and tend to have more rocker, while tripping canoes are longer, with less rise from end to end. Tripping canoes also have maximum space for storage, allowing the transport of food and gear for extended trips. Whitewater canoes are designed for maximum maneuverability and a higher water line to keep the boat drier while paddling through whitewater rapids. Canoes of both varieties come in solo and tandem models.

SILVERBIRCH CANOES | BROADLAND 16 - DURALITE

Drawing on the classic lines and proven design characteristics of a traditional Prospector canoe, the Broadland is a true all rounder and a real workhorse. We have optimized the chine, camber, and sidewall profile from the original Prospector design to increase both primary and secondary stability – making the Broadland 16 a confidence inspiring canoe to paddle. A carefully considered rocker profile, and a symmetrical hull form ensure the Broadland 16 paddles well either tandem or solo.

SILVERBIRCH CANOES | COVERT

In development nothing was off limits and nothing was pre-set – we simply sat down in our shaping bay with a blank piece of paper and one simple brief – To create the fastest, most manoeuvrable, and most predictable Open Canoe possible. At the core of this philosophy is our stepped rocker profile. The step in the tail ensures a clean release of water from the stern, which not only reduces drag, but also helps to reduce the tendency for the tail to bog down on boily eddy lines or when getting bounced around by large lateral waves. The sidewall profile of the boat is also continually curved. This helps boost secondary stability and is carefully angled to keep the waterline width to a minimum.
